Factors Affecting Price

Material: Stainless steel and aluminum trays are more expensive than painted or galvanized steel. Length: Longer sections reduce per-meter cost. Accessories: Trays including connectors, clamps, or covers cost more.

Supplier and shipping: Local distributors may charge more for fast delivery, while bulk orders from overseas suppliers can reduce unit cost.

Recommendation

For a 55 mm mesh cable tray, expect to pay around $2–$5 per meter for standard galvanized steel, with higher prices for stainless steel or pre-assembled kits. Always check if connectors or mounting hardware are included, as this can affect total installation cost.
